

STUDY 41 CONNECTED

We do not have to look very far to see some of our connections with the wider world.

Think about the food you eat and where it comes from. The cereals you eat were probably grown in the United States, your jam might have come from Belgium, your fruit from Latin America and your tea from India. The T-shirts you wear may have been made in Bangladesh and the jeans in America. Some of the clothes we wear do not carry a label stating the country of origin because they are made for large chain stores in Europe.

From the moment you wake up in the morning you rely on and are linked to the wider world.

How has Your Morning Connected You to the Global Village?

➔ This morning you could have got out of a bed made of wood from Norway, thrown back sheets made of cotton grown in India and pulled back curtains that were sewn in a factory in China.

➔ Your breakfast may have been made up of cereals grown in the US, oranges from Spain and coffee from Brazil. The TV you might have watched before you got ready for school was probably made in Japan.

➔ The jumper you pulled on as you got ready for school could have been made with Australian wool, the school shirt sewn in a factory in Taiwan and washed by a detergent made in Germany.
